ROYAL VISIT TO EDINBURGH

R.S.G.S. Jubilee

(Special Air Mail Service)

Glasgow, Oct. 28.
The Royal Scottish Geographical Society will celebrate its jubilee with a banquet in Edinburgh, when the Duke of York is to represent the King, the patron of the Society.
His Royal Highness will attend the inaugural lecture in the Usher Hall in the afternoon, when he will hear Lord Meston speak on "The Geographical Background of an Indian Constitution." There will be a reception to delegates from all parts of the world, and the Duke will present to Lord Meston the Society's geographical medal for 1934-35, and to Miss Isobel W. Hutchison, the niece of Robert Hutchison, of Carlisle, a well-known botanist and member of the first Council of the Society fifty years ago, the Mungo Park medal in recognition of her services in Greenland, Iceland, and last year in Alaska.
It will be fifty years on October 28 since the Royal Scottish Geographical Society was formed, at a meeting in Edinburgh, on the motion of Professor James Gellie. It was the second geographical society to be founded in Great Britain, the only other being the London one.

A Young Enthusiast
The inception of the Scottish Society was largely owing to the enthusiasm of the young cartographer, John G. Bartholomew, who, seeing the "penny-farthing" forecast in the development of transport a great demand for maps. Having travelled in Germany and other countries in order to learn how such societies were run, he returned to Scotland and enlisted sufficient support to ensure the formation of a Scottish Geographical Society in 1884.
The Society has taken a keen interest in geography teaching in the schools and universities, and was instrumental in having lectureships established at Glasgow and Edinburgh Universities and a Chair at Edinburgh University. It has enabled the public of Scotland to see and listen to the world's greatest scientists, explorers and travellers.
From its foundation, too, the Society has borne its part in giving financial support to scientific and exploration expeditions.

THE CROCHETED COWLS

Readily Understood
Patterns

Since everyone has become monkish and in one form or other has taken to the bowl, it remains to devise the cowl in as many different forms as possible. Cowl invention, indeed, is likely to prove one of the winter's amusements, from its adaptation from the handkerchief to works of art, which include the knitting and decrease, as one would for a bias scarf, laying the knitting on the pattern to see that one is keeping the slant correctly. The two halves can then be joined. The same plan can be followed with crochet. In some ways the latter stitch is better, especially where different colours are used, as the join falls in to advantage. Silver thread makes a charming cowl and gives the amateur dress the professional look, which amateurs too reluctantly see only in other people's clothes.

be white, parchment, silver, or red. And it may be made wholly of knitting or crochet.

Moss-stitch can be used for knitting, and if silk, including artificial silk, is used, or better still the boucle silk and cotton mixtures, the result will be a close, rough-grained material which has all the interest of an important feature. The easiest way generally is to take the straight line middle of the cowl pattern and then increase and decrease, as one would for a bias scarf, laying the knitting on the pattern to see that one is keeping the slant correctly. The two halves can then be joined. The same plan can be followed with crochet. In some ways the latter stitch is better, especially where different colours are used, as the join falls in to advantage. Silver thread makes a charming cowl and gives the amateur dress the professional look, which amateurs too reluctantly see only in other people's clothes.

AROUND THE SHOPS

MAIZEE'S

Have just received some marvellous styles in the line of costume jewellery. These are absolutely the latest from New York and San Francisco.

Beautiful diamante clasps, and clips that are about the best I've seen for a long time.

Earrings of all types the latest are ones that just fit around the back of the ears, just like a pair of spectacles, and Maizees have even rings and bracelets to match, and a lot of others that would be best to see for one's self.

LANE CRAWFORD

This week Lane Crawford have a wonderful line in Fur Trimmed Coats. There was an extra smart one in brown velvour cloth the edges of the collar were bound with beaver fur which gives the coat front a square neck effect.

Another in a bottle green with wide lapels and trimmed with marmot fur and large collar was what I fancied.

Wine Red seems to be also a popular colour this winter. A model in this shade, made of velvour cloth had a black seal cape which can be worn separately if required and I should say would look exquisite on a tall fair girl.

Have a smart lot of coats in Tweeds with fur and without and they are all made of very good quality.

She has them in all sizes and colours and her prices are most moderate.

MAYO'S

Are showing this week some very dressy hats in felts and of course every hat is a model made specially to one's individual taste.

Another thing I must remind our readers that they will remodell any old hat for you and they turn them out smart too.

WASHABLE GLOVES

Chamois leather and other washable gloves are inclined to pull and tear quickly when washed owing to constant rubbing. It is a good plan and one which helps considerably in their preservation, to wash the gloves either on the hands or with a little rubber brush. A small rubber nailbrush is excellent for the purpose as it will not pull or injure the fabric. The best way to ensure the gloves drying a good shape is to blow into the fingers after washing. Stretching afterwards and consequent seam splitting is largely avoided in this way.

Excess Baggage

The ladies of the Helping Hand Society enjoyed a swap social on Friday evening. Everybody brought something they didn't need. Many of the ladies were accompanied by their husbands.

Up-To-Date

Mr. Duham was complaining that she could never find tips for conversation.

"Why don't you read books?" asked a friend.

"What kind of books?"

"Oh, any kind; biographies and histories and so on."

The fruit of this advice was evident a few days later when visitor called.

"Wasn't it very sad," Mrs. Duham remarked brightly, "about poor Mary Queen of Scots?"

Dress For Cold
Weather

The colder weather has brought out furs and woollen clothes. Black duvetyn coats trimmed with broadtail or astrakhan are worn with or without belts, the line is slim and straight and there is no flare. There are yokes, waistcoats, cape collars, and small capes of flat fur. Thick white satin may make a lining, but black coats are often lined with black and brown with brown. Light dresses of woollen, heavy silk crepe, or crepe satin are worn under dark coats. Satin skirts continue to be worn with blouses or tunics of silver or gilt metal tissue. Necklines are high and collarless or else draped. Blouses, tunics, and dresses fasten down the front, or the side, or the back. Long sleeves are more usual than short; shoulder lines are smooth and seamless; and afternoon skirts reach to the ankle, but being all tight they are becoming only to the very slim.

Close fitting stocking caps, with the crown and tassel draped to fall in front and to the left side, are comfortable. Suzy makes a boat-shaped felt with a narrow brim turned back all round. Trimmings are rarely more than a bright feather, a short quill, or a jewel. Soft and pliable felt and doekain are two materials for hats which are black unless a dress and coat call for another colour. Maria Guy makes a felt hat with a narrow brim and a crown which is higher at the back than the front and is trimmed behind with a bright feather tip. A Cossack toque 2ft. high looks too heavy. Velvet toques by Louise Bourbon have feather trimmings, and are worn with little veils. Velvet trimmings are put on felt hats and the scarf may be velvet also. Velvet waistcoats are fitted over little dresses and blouses; there are also fur waistcoats.

Glitter, rather than colour, marks many winter fashions. A gleam of steel, silver, or gilt on a black or a dark dress is more usual than colour. The best walking dresses are black or dark, but the belts, buttons, necklaces, and clips shine. There are also pale pastel afternoon dresses of silk or wool. The figured dress has given way to the one colour crinkled silk crepe. Colour prevails in the evening. Yarn dyed taffetas dress are of soft yellow, faded pink, shot blue, tender brown. Pale rose and pale turquoise satins make princess and Directoire dresses. Pale green, flame red, saxe blue, and heliotrope are at their best in velvet or crepe georgette. Lace is used for evening and afternoon blouses, preferably Venetian point or guipure. Taffetas and lace lend themselves to fullness; velvet and satin are right for princess and Directoire lines. Flowers, real or artificial, are worn; gloves are usual, and there may be a hidden pocket instead of a bag, or a muff can be treated as a bag.

FASHION'S NEW DIVIDING LINE

Distinctive Dresses
For Day And Demi-
Toilette

As was the case a quarter of a century ago, a marked line is being drawn between the more formal trend of dress and the tailor-made.

The difference between the old and the new treatment of both is very interesting. The modern frocks are less formal and entirely comfortable, and the tailor-made equally smart but often more expensive. Possibly the compromise for limited incomes to-day is the ensemble—that is to say, there is the "little dress" and the long semi-tailored coat.

This ensemble, with the carefully thought-out details, is a more recent mode of dressing and is more usually adopted by the average woman.

She, however, will be able to make up her requirement for sport and country clothes with the new and attractive knitted variety.

Still, this newer formality must be taken into consideration.

BETTER DRESSING

Another and most important point is that the changes indicate a real improvement in industry in every phase of fashion goods.

The new way of dressing is to aim at the finished product as an entire whole. This idea was formulated over a hundred years ago, but was then only possible for a very limited section of society. To-day practically all women have their opportunity.

At the moment the more formal styles for afternoon and evening, which include very beautiful furs, are of somewhat luxurious trend.

The salins or velvets for afternoon show the shorter skirt, very tight and slim, therefore generally slit at the hem. The blouse-bodice often demonstrates the Russian influence. Very often some attractive tunics are the choice.

A dark green satin tight skirt cut to the ankles and slit in two places had a tunic of a green damé woven with a faint thread in gold, green and silver, this pouched slightly over a belt of the satin. The neck-line was squarely draped with a scarf of the same. This type of frock could be worn under a fur or darkest green velvet coat with a turban to match.

Such fabrics indicate a certain amount of formality.

Just as much worn, and more generally useful and the favourite vogue for London and Paris, are the simple black wool frocks. There are often relieved with white or a light colour, or else a display of fine hand-work. Other very dark colours may ring the changes, and occasionally the newer sparkling but subdued material is introduced as well.

This is as practical and safe a mode of dressing as black, as any nicey fashioned dark frocks look so well in winter under cloth or fur coats. The clever woman can always add her individual and becoming detail of white lingerie in a jabot or colour in a scarf and waistbelt.

Some of the little wool afternoon dresses can also be admirably adapted to do duty for dinner, theatre or cinema, for they look very well, worn with a hat. The smarter ones may also be in bright colours, but in wool fabrics. Practical requirements for a London winter, however, generally demand the darker shades, and what brightness is desired comes from the new gleams in materials and trimmings. Many of these afternoon and simple dinner dresses show long-fitted sleeves, which are becoming and cosy. Neck-lines can be varied to suit the individual.

For cut and formality the exclusive "tailors" revert to the more perfected styles of last century. The coats are more becomingly and easily cut, but they mark a definite waist-line and much detailed workmanship.

Some youthful short coats show a seamed inward-fitted look. Many longer ones have a basque and spring out in the old manner. Skirts are all tight, trim, and shorter, with slit hems unless there is a well-pressed under

MORE ELABORATE BLOUSES

Blouses are worn, and far more elaborately fashioned than we have been used to of late. Coloured blouses are smarter than the white, unless for the country. The heavy silk tailored shirt shares popularity with the skillfully knit new jumpers. The most chic of the new tailored suits are in the familiar black, darkest grey, and possibly a dark brown and green. They are worn with a fox tie or some expensive new fur collar, with a possibly elaborate toque of velvet and fur, or one of the new felt to match the coloured blouse.

Gloves and shoes must work in with the scheme of dressing, not omitting such details as pockette, buttonhole, belt, and pocket-handkerchief.

Modern dressing, if it is to attain the correct new standard, is a strenuous affair. Money alone will not achieve the correct result. Taste, and knowledge of the fitness of things, must come into the scheme. The wearer of tailor-made must choose the right accessories to add the more decorative details of current fashion. She must know exactly when and where to wear the perfect dark suit or the more sporting teed.

SURPRISES AND REVIVALS

In Winter

There is much of the old elegance as well as modern daring about many phases of the winter modes. Quite differing styles are chosen for mornings and afternoons. The designers have stood out for a marked difference between the essentially practical and that more leisurely, elegant note that has been creeping in for some time. This is a return to the Edwardian and late Victorian way of dressing, but with a difference. Sporting or country suits and ensembles for mornings and hard wear, including wet weather clothes, are as chic as velvet and feathers for afternoons.

Materials can be divided or combined into uses or both. Corded velvet is delightful for the small sporting sort of hat with its necktie to match. Felt can be fitted with a dented crown to wear with a hard type of coat and skirt.

The pill-box toque is one of the smartest of the new models for autumn. Princess Marina has made it popular, though it is not easy to wear unless trimming and angle are carefully adjusted.

No phase of millinery fashion was ever more flattering than the eighteenth-century modes in hats, the three-cornered creation in velvet and feathers that sat so charmingly on softly waved curls. Yet the tricorn can be simple enough for mornings, as well as the perfect completion to an afternoon ensemble of rich velvet and fur. In felt, with a single wing or a bow, it is disarmingly simple with a piquant tilt.

All sorts of varieties in the old coaching styles—late eighteenth and early nineteenth century shapes—are interesting this season. The Robespierre hard square-crown is clever in felt, or in dark velours. The later boat-shape, with narrow curling brim; a quill at the side of a dented crown is piquant. Sombreros that can be large enough for sun or small enough to recall a one-side cloche are worn.

There are high crowns and shallow ones, but brims all tend to go up at the back. The new "tilt" is all forward, and this one can safely predict to last over the winter. It goes so well with the high collars of fur.

Fur trims millinery as well as dresses. The Cossack cap, with a crown of grey astrakhan mixed with navy cloth, is a smart and distinctive vogue, to complete a navy wool tunic banded with the fur, and a double cape collar and muff all of the grey astrakhan.

Grey gloves, pockette, and grey shoes will further ensure the success of a luncheon ensemble. Perhaps an additional feminine Edwardian touch will be added by a cluster of shaded violets orchids nestling in the fur.

THE AFTERNOON
NOTEBetween Luncheon
And Tea

The afternoon dress is at once a necessity and a difficulty. While certain periods of the day are definitely covered by a sports frock or suit, or by an evening frock, the afternoon is comprehensive in character and at one extreme overlaps into sports clothes and at the other into evening frocks. Thus while a smartly cut woollen frock may be perfectly suited for the sports end of the scale, it is wrong as soon as days beg into close in and rooms grow hot. Equally, the satin or crepe dress, which can be worn on into the evenings on occasion, is not suitable for lunch, unless made severely to conform by means of a coat. When one speaks, therefore, of the afternoon frock one really means a trinity of frocks which only the greatest good management can combine in one.

The LeLONG dress of navy rough wool, buttoning down the front, is lent its air of sophistication by means of the white grosgrain neckpiece and cuffs, both of which carry on the buttoned idea. With the Suzy hat, a sort of cross between a beret and a marquis hat, it is perfectly suited for lunch and onwards through the afternoon. The surface roughness of the material, combined with the rich white of the fittings, makes that sort of contrast which is effective because it looks simple but is not. It should be noted, further, that the only exaggeration in this very roughness and that, in contradiction to many head-dresses, the hair is severe and neat and the hat the reverse of many of the fantasies worn as being fashionable. About tea-time this kind of dress would begin to look and feel hot. Its place would then be taken by another which could also have been worn at lunch-time.

The next kind of afternoon frock would be suitable for a well-dressed luncheon and one to which the wearer would go without any preliminary morning avocations. This would be either a tunic dress or one perhaps with a narrow, slightly slashed skirt, both or either being made of velvet, cloche, thick silk crepe, or satin. The material marks the differences acutely. The velvet or velveteen frock with a tunic which looks almost like a double skirt would make for extreme slimness in the skirt, emphasising this up means of huge armholes with correspondingly big sleeves. A small, square neck, reaching to the base of the throat, might develop into a square white inset reaching to the broad belt. Or, a round at the base of the neck might be broken by a waterfall of white or fluting of white, standing on its edge under the chin, as though it were ribbon looped. White patches everywhere relieve the winter afternoon frock. If there is a deep rectangular inset in front, rather like a skirt bosom, it is often divided into two sections by means of the bodice which buttons all up the front. This sort of dress reaches to just above the ankle, and is convenient and at the same time ceremonial in appearance.

Long Skirts

The third afternoon dress savours much of the evening. It reaches to the ankles or may even be longer. It may take such forms as a long straight skirt, split one side, with a sort of Magyar bodice without sleeves. The Magyar effect is much exaggerated and often includes a cowl effect at the back and sometimes much drapery across the throat, which is then carried back over the shoulders and down to the waist, leaving a small V at the nape of the neck. Or a slim, long skirt of velvet may have a long tulle of metal with sleeves to just above the elbows, and with the material draped round the square neck. Here no belt is worn, and the tunic fits the figure fairly closely. Finally there is the ground length evening black frock, over which a close-fitting, short silver or lame jacket is worn, with tight sleeves and with buttons all down the front. This afternoon frock can become evening at a moment's notice.

The "Goal"

Walter: "Haven't they given you a menu yet, sir?"
Diner (wearily): "Yes, but I finished that an hour ago."

PEASANT MODES

NEW TRENDS FROM THE BALKANS

The peasant influence in mid-season clothes attacks both Directorate and "streamlines." One new model cast on the former plan, however, is most alluring in black satin crepe. It has a split down one side of a slim, slightly trained skirt, and a swathed belt of light dahlia purple outlined with silver. Two other gowns showing this swathed theme to great advantage are in amethyst crepe with the new vaguely gathered deep flounced hemline, and crinkled crepe belt shading from deep cerise to pale pink, and a champagne coloured satin model with a lime green swathe. A black mink coat with pelts worked up on diagonal instead of straight lines was shown over this gown.

A peasant model in velvet is a very becoming wrap that swags differently from the "coolie" shape. That is to say, the style has been brought nearer West and takes us into the Balkans, where national peasant styles have gathered necklines to thigh-length coats which sometimes sway to hang into the merest gathers from a yoke at the back. The model may be with or without sleeves. The latter tendency brings a new capped vogue.

Studied Simplicity

This new simplicity is not so easy to acquire as one imagines. Proportions must be calculated on a mathematical scale so that these garments look not more or less but exactly right. This, likewise, applies to the new bloused corsage with gathered peasant décollete for a gown of rust red crepe faintly lame with gold. It is for wear under a light autumn yellow caped-coat of heavy mat silken crepe, with neckline to tally. Bloused backs, too, break up the streamline notion, one being executed into an otherwise plain gown which is in a lovely tone of cerulean blue. Two large rust brown and yellow chrysanthemums are set at the waist-line.

Corsage seem easier, even when not bloused, but with the flat ditch cross-over pointing front and back. In one instance white crepe satin shows the movement with selvedge border under a wide-sleeved bolero coat of tortoiseshell brown paillettes. The skirt hangs on a perfectly straight simple line, with a short sun-ray godet inserted at the back for ease of movement.

The flounced hemline brings a new charm to otherwise plain evening skirts. It commences to flow from beneath knee depth, but is carefully gauged so as not to break continuity of line, and may be merely set at the back.

The Cossack style is considerably improved for day wear in a model with peasant details. It is in dark brown woolen—the coat with gathered back hangings from a yoke, and the skirt gathered in similar fashion in front to hang from a yoke. A "binder" belt of rust red, and choker collar faced with the contrast, help to form a most attractive ensemble.

COLOURS FOR DULL DAYS

When the sun shines is the time when the harmony of colour in rooms is put to the most severe test.

This observation was made by someone, but it is not always true of colour, so if the colours in a room are carefully thought out and judiciously arranged the sunlight will help the effect by 50 per cent. But if the colours have been arranged by an incompetent hand sunlight will have the opposite effect.

It is not at all an easy thing to blend colours which will look attractive in a room into which the sun is not shining, and which will look equally well under the sun's searching rays.

The artificial light of evening time has also to be considered. A very different effect may be produced if great care is not exercised in selecting the right shades. Certain reds will stand both sunlight and artificial light. Blues, if of the Airwerp variety, will be right both by day and night, but blues with the cobalt strain in them tend to turn grey or black under artificial light. This is especially noticeable in carpets of thick pile. This cobalt colour, looking beautiful by day, but disappointing by night. Browns will, in most cases, show up better in artificial light than in daylight, especially if the material happens to be a damask or a velvet.

SHORT-TENANCY FLATS

By The Week, Month,
Or The Year

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Oct. 26.
London is becoming used to the sight of huge new blocks of flats
in all likely and unlikely places,
but the new Mount Royal building near the Marble Arch, which is to be opened on November 1, is something new. It consists of 650 furnished flats at prices varying from three to seven guineas a week which can be rented by the week,
the month, or the year. The tenant can eat in a restaurant or in his own flat. Service is provided, but if he has a passion for

Showing At The King's

"Grand Canary," now showing at the King's Theatre is a truly magnificent love drama, giving Warner Baxter one of his finest romantic roles.

Set in the picturesque background of the place from which the title of the film is derived, the picture tells of a young doctor and scientist (Warner Baxter) whose career is apparently wrecked by the failure of his new serum which kills three people.
He starts on a journey to oblivion and on board a ship bound for the Canary Islands, he meets a beautiful girl (Madge Evans) sailing from an unhappy marriage. They fall in love and when they reach the place Baxter's scientific skill is summoned to stem a plague of yellow fever. The way in which he does his heroic work and in which he saves the life of the girl he loves, forms a thrilling climax and makes the picture both dramatic and entertaining.

As stated, the picture affords Baxter one of his finest romantic roles. He was ably supported by Madge Evans as the girl, while the rest of the cast including Marjorie Rambau, Zita Johann and H. B.
Warner, help in no small measure towards the success of the film.

privacy he can lock his door, in which case nobody else except the manager will be able to open it.
The front door of the building itself, on the other hand, has no lock. He can come and go at all hours without hindrance.

Inspecting the flats to-day, one was interested to see what is considered essential to the tenant's comfort nowadays. Every sideboard has a cocktail cabinet and every kitchenette has a refrigerator.
So far as one can judge, a lazy person need never leave the building at all. Within its four walls he can consult a doctor or a dentist, buy his cigarettes, have his hair cut or his wife's face lifted, and even take his exercise, for a wide balcony like the promenade deck of a ship runs round
the whole of the seventh floor.
The balcony is really an ingenious form of compliance with the L.C.C.
regulation that all floors higher than eighty feet from the ground must have balconies for fire-escape purposes.

KNIGHTS OF THE AIR

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Oct. 26.
It was stated authoritatively that the King will take an early opportunity of conferring knighthoods on C. W. A. Scott and T.
Campbell Black, winners of the great air race.

The news will be welcomed both in England and Australia.
The conferring of two knighthoods for the same adventure has a precedent in the case of John Alcock and Arthur Whitten Brown who flew the Atlantic in 1919.

One suggestion made in London
was that the Duke of Gloucester should confer the knight-hoods on behalf of the King during the Melbourne centenary celebrations.

RADIO STARS

In "Twenty Million
Sweethearts"

The old days when audiences left a theatre whistling and humming, will return when the First National picture, "Twenty Million Sweethearts," open to-morrow at the Alhambra Theatre.

Harry Warren and Al Dubin who wrote the melodies for "42nd Street," "Gold Diggers of 1933," and music in "Footlight Parade," are responsible for the music and lyrics of "20 Million Sweethearts," supplying four new song hits.

The Four Mills Brothers, radio headliners, contribute a group of their favourite selections to the picture, as does the famous musical aggregation, Ted Fio Rito and his orchestra.

The Three Radio Rogues famed from coast to coast for their perfect impersonations of radio notables, open the picture as their voices produce flawless imitations of several celebrities of the world of the ether waves.

Dick Powell, plus an elongated, waxed false mustache and a waite's costume, starts his singing in the picture with the popular song, "The Man on the Flying Trapeze." The first part of the story discloses Dick as a singing waiter in a Hollywood cafe, and he carries out his part with all the gusto of the performers in Bob Perry's "Brass Band," one of the show places of the film colony.

A revised version of "The Last Roundup" is rendered by a quartette of Hebrew comics who, with novelty, name their selection "The Last Wind-up."

One of the first shots of a large metropolitan radio station, when the course of the story first lands
Dick there, affords a performance of the inimitable Mills Brothers as they render, "It wasn't Told To Me—I Only Heard."

Ginger Rogers, as a radio performer, is heard as she sings
"Out For No Good," the first Warren and Dubin music to be heard in the engaging picture.
Ginger, formerly on the musical comedy stage, reveals a delightful singing voice.

"STRAIGHT IS THE WAY"

Now Showing At The Queen's

A very absorbing picture, full of human interest, is the current film attraction at the Queen's Theatre.
The story concerns a young man who, having served five years' imprisonment, decides to keep straight. He is beset with many temptations and ultimately finds himself in a scrape from which, however, he emerges triumphantly.

A romantic interest runs through the whole length of the film, which, on the whole is quite good entertainment.
The supporting programme, is better than we have usually come to expect. The "Goofy Movies" is full of subtle wit, while the "Vital Victuals" teaches some tricks in cooking in a most interesting manner conceivable. The "Big Idea" is a one-reel comedy that is packed with ticklish situations while those who were thrilled by the news of the recent shooting of King Alexander and the England-Australia Air race should not miss the "Hearst Newsreel" which contains some reference to both these chapters in history.

The Four Mills Brothers, when they next appear, give a novelty rendition of the catchy tune,
"How 'm I doin'?" which starts
feet tapping in time.

Dick's following song, as the story unfolds is "I'll Sing Along With You," another Warren and Dubin hit, although in the picture,
it would appear that Allen Jenkins is the author.

"I'll Sing Along With You"
has all the essentials of a hit song. It has rhythm, swing, engaging words and is rendered with all of Dick's engaging personality.

"Fair and Warner" is another song by the ace-team which is destined to hit the best-seller class of the music marts. Ted Fio Rito and his orchestra, in their appearance as the music-masters in a Long Island Inn, deliver a

LILLY TURNER

Showing At The Alhambra

Guy Kibbee is realizing an old and all-but-forgotten boyhood ambition of his in playing the role of "Doc" McGill, travelling miracle man, gland specialist and all-around rejuvenator, in Ruth Chat-terton's latest First National picture, "Lilly Turner," now playing at the Alhambra.

Kibbee when ten years old, was consumed with a burning desire to be a travelling medicine man, at the head of his own show. He says he never missed any of the medicine shows that came to the Texas town, where he lived.

"Boy, what a kick I used to get out of listening to the Doc's sonorous periods, as he rolled off his spiel about the marvelous remedies," said Kibbee. "I used to go home after one of those sessions and practice reeling off the rig-marole myself. I thought it was pretty good, too."

"A little show of some kind—a blackface act, or a singing and dancing number, an oriental dancer, a ropewalker, a monologist—always preceded the business part of the performance. The glamour of it was real. I believed every word those old fakirs uttered."

"That's why I had such a lot of fun playing Doc McGill in the picture. I played the old boy as he looked to the kind of an unsophis-ticated youth I was in those days."

George Brent has the leading male role opposite Miss Chatterton in "Lilly Turner," while others in the cast include Frank McHugh, Ruth Donnelly, Robert Barrat, Marjorie Gableton, Gordon Westcott and Grant Mitchell. William A.
Wellman directed.

marvelous recording of the song hit.
"What Are Your Intentions?"
is the fourth of the Warren and Dubin hits in the picture. When first heard, it is rendered by Ted Fio Rito's orchestra with Ted playing a piano solo. The trio of good-looking singers—with the orchestra, The Three Debutantes, also give this song in their clever fashion.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY

Coming To The Queen's

A photoplay which must be included on anyone's list of the ten best pictures of 1934 comes on Sunday to the Queen's Theatre.
It is Paramount's production of "Death Takes A Holiday," starring Frederic March and featuring Evelyn Venable, Sir Guy Standing, and Kent Taylor. Though directed by a man comparatively new in directorial circles, Mitchell Lelien,
it is one of the most magnificently beautiful productions ever to grace the talking screen.

Its grandiose settings, its superb dialogue and splendid acting make this provocative, dramatic romance, one of the great pictures of all time. From the famous play by Alberto Casella, adapted into English by Walter Ferris, Paramount gave the screen play into the capable hands of Maxwell Anderson, Pulitzer prize winner, and Gladys Lehman.

The story is based on the intriguing idea of Death, the eternal shadow, taking a three-day holiday that he may come to this world to taste life's pleasures to the full.
He comes as a gay, dashing romantic Prince, his real person unknown to the guests at the house party at which he makes his appearance. For three days, he participates in all their games, and pastimes, seeking to find some reason for man's love of life and fear of death. But the prince becomes bored with life's pleasures.
He saves the excitement of love
until nearly the end of his holiday.
And that too, disillusion him. He is unable to find an unselfish love,
a love that knows no fear, a love
so eternal that even the knowledge of his true character would be unable to shatter it.
Almost at the end of his holiday,
his search is successful. He meets a beautiful young girl and in her arms finds all of life's beauty.

Then his holiday is over, and, like any mortal man, he is afraid, dreads to leave the life he finds
so dear.

Mitchell Lelien, the picture's director, may well be proud of this,
his second picture. Like "Cradle Song," the picture which brought Dorthea Wick to the American screen, it is a masterpiece of photoplay art.
Frederic March delivers a splendid performance, one which is bound to bring him to the fore as one of the outstanding conten-dents for the 1934 Best Acting Award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Evelyn Venable is excellent as is every member of the cast of this well-mounted production.

BAG SNATCHER SENTENCED

On a charge of snatching a hand bag from Miss Ada Choy in Wellington Street on Wednesday evening, Wong Fook Shing was at Central Magistracy yesterday sentenced to six months hard labour by Mr. Macfadyen.

DOG-OWNERS FINED

Before Mr. Hamilton at Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, several dog owners were summoned for allowing their dogs to be abroad unmuzzled.

G. E. Lelper, No. 7 Carnarvon Building, Cameron Road, was summoned for allowing his black and white dog to be without a muzzle on October 30, at 9.55 a.m.

Defendant denied the charge and the case was adjourned until Tuesday, November 20.

F. H. Carvalho, 15 Ashley Road, was fined $10 on a similar summons. Mrs. A. B. Osmund, 41B, Hillwood Road, was also summoned for a similar offence, and was also fined $10.

A fine of $25 with the alternative of three weeks' hard labour was imposed on an 18-year old apprentice carpenter who was charged before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, with cruelty to a pigeon by plucking feathers from it whilst it was alive.

A dog belonging to Signalman Stewart of H.M.S. Whitehall bit P. C. Macdonald of the Naval Yard Police on Wednesday. The dog is at present under observation in Kennedy Town.

In another case, a dog belonging to a Japanese was seized and sent to Kennedy town after it had bitten Kajiro Nakamura.

APPEAL FAILS

Manslaughter Sentence Confirmed

Mr. Justice Jacks and Mr. Justice Hayden sat yesterday in the Court of Criminal Appeal to hear the appeal filed by a prisoner, Lo Siu Kwong, who had been sentenced by His Honour the Chief Justice to four years' hard labour in the October Criminal Sessions for the manslaughter of Chan Sap Yee in an opium den at Hollywood Road.

It will be recalled that after the prisoner was convicted, at the time of his trial, he made a speech prior to sentence being passed on him, to the effect that he had to support his aged parents and his own family, and moreover he was prepared to support the wife and family of the deceased, who happened to be his sworn brother. He went on to beg the Court to care for the welfare of the family of the deceased.

The prisoner did not appear in person and his appeal was limited to the ground of sympathy.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, appearing for the Crown, who were respondents, supported the sentence, on the ground that it was by no means excessive. He quoted many authorities to show that for manslaughter such a sentence was not too heavy. He inquired if their Lordships would like to hear him on the facts.

Their Lordships indicated that they did not consider that necessary.

In confirming the sentence, Mr. Justice Jacks said that the appeal was one against the sentence only and the ground for such appeal was that the prisoner had his family to support. If the appellant sought mercy on proper grounds he should send his appeal to the proper quarters where, no doubt, it will be given due consideration.

The sentence was confirmed, the Judges deciding that it should run from October 25, when the prisoner was convicted.

GUN PRACTICE

It has been notified that Gun Practice for the week ending Nov. 24, 1934, will be carried out from Forts on dates and times as under: Stonecutters, 20.11.34 between 8.30 a.m. and 2 p.m., South of Kap Sing Mun and North of Kau-I Chau; Stonecutters, 22.11.34 between 5 p.m. and 11 p.m., South of Kap Sing Mun and North of Kau-I Chau.

NO CHEQUERS VISIT

Japanese Admiral Not To Be Guest Of Premier

London, Oct. 26. The members of the Japanese naval delegation had further consultations with the Japanese Ambassador in London, Mr. Matsudaira.

Admiral Yamamoto, the chief Japanese delegate, is having a series of interviews with the Ambassador upon the definite plan which the Admiral has brought from Tokyo for the Three-Power conversations.

There is no truth in the report that Admiral Yamamoto may spend the week-end at Chequers as the guest of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

The first contact between the British Prime Minister and the Japanese Admiral will be at the opening meeting between the British and Japanese delegations.

GANDHI'S WISH TO RETIRE

Party Suppressed By His Presence

The proceedings of the All-India Congress Committee has begun, the chief feature being an address by Mr. Gandhi. He said that he wanted to retire from the congress organization, if it was possible for him to secure the blessings of the Committee.

Mr. Gandhi went on to say that he felt the congress was being suppressed by his presence and was not giving natural expression to its views. At the same time, he deplored the artificiality and corruption in the movement and the overpowering desire to wrangle; and said that if Congressmen could not possibly cleanse themselves of those things he had no option but to retire. He wanted to retire in order to give the Congress the chance to train itself, and also to grow himself. He was leaving in order to develop the power of non-violence. Independence was impossible without civil resistance. India could never get liberty without non-violent means and without non-violence expressed in terms of civil resistance. He knew of no historic instance of purely constitutional means having clothed any nation with liberty.

Mr. Gandhi indicated that he might return and say, "Now I can lead you to the goal and we can march in perfect safety." He also said that without Hindu-Muslim unity and the removal of untouchability Congressmen could not produce a real non-violent atmosphere among themselves.

MURDER OF FARMERS

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Warsaw, Nov. 14.

A shocking sequel to a dispute was revealed on Wednesday at a court martial in Przemyśl when an infantryman, Sroka, was sentenced to death for the murder of two farmers. In the course of the altercation some time ago, Sroka was or felt himself insulted by the farmers and took the matter so much to heart that he deserted his army and taking a rifle with him, lay on ambush for the two farmers and shot them dead. After hiding in the woods for two months, Sroka gave himself up to the military authorities and confessed to the crime. The sentence of the court was executed immediately in the absence of the priest whose offices Sroka had refused.

SENT TO HOUSE OF DETENTION

English Woman Convicted

The case against Florence Helen Stratford, a middle-aged English woman, charged with being a vagrant, was concluded at Central Magistracy yesterday when Mr. W. Schofield, the Magistrate, committed her to the House of Detention.

Detective Sergeant Mottram appeared for the prosecution, and defendant was not legally represented.

In evidence, Mr. A. K. Dimond, manager of the Peninsula Hotel, said that Miss Stratford went to the hotel on June 28, when she arrived from Australia, with a letter from Messrs. Burns Phillips & Co., Brisbane, whom the hotel represented. She had three pieces of luggage. When her bills were presented, Miss Stratford refused payment because she said that she wanted to get at the bottom of something that was "hounding" her, although she asserted that she had money. She left the hotel without settling the account, and her luggage was detained and later handed over to Mme. Tasari.

Defendant then made rambling allegations of mysterious "hounding" by some people who were "estranging" her wherever she went. She professed to have written articles to the papers although not a journalist and that she had started on a novel which was not a success.

Asked if she had looked for work here, she replied that she had been to see a number of people without success.

On the question of money, defendant said that she had sent her passage ticket back to Australia to claim refund on the unused portion. Defendant asserted that she possessed "untouchable" things in England, on which funds could not be raised in Hong Kong.

Defendant refused to be sent back to England when his Worship suggested that course as she could not realise on her "untouchable" things in Hong Kong. She insisted that the "houndings" and "estrangements" would be continued; she wished to remain and look for work here.

His Worship said that he could come to no other conclusion but to convict her as a vagrant in that she had no visible means of support.

It was stated that the Hospital authorities could not permit defendant to stay on in the hospital as she was not under medical treatment.

His Worship finally made an order committing the defendant to the House of Detention, in the absence of any other suitable institution that would meet the case.

RACE MATERIALISM

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Stuttgart, Nov. 14.

In their attempts to cleanse the nation of foreign racial elements, the National-Socialists must not make the mistake of going to the other extreme by falling victims to "race materialism" and the craze for blondes to which streams of hydrogen-peroxide are being sacrificed, stated Dr. Staehle in an address to members of the National-Socialist Teachers Union here on Wednesday. The speaker stressed that it could not be assumed that every blonde man and woman is innately a pure Germanic and beneath a dark interior a heroic soul could also often be found.

DUTCH DEFENCE

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

The Hague, Nov. 14.

That Holland is in keeping with the general trend towards increased armaments and planning measures to strengthen her national defence is announced by the Minister of Defence, Dr. Deckers before the second Chamber on Wednesday. The Minister declared that in view of present-day conditions it is no longer possible to carry out the proposed measures of economy regarding the Dutch defence forces. Although the Dutch Government is taking the view that the possibility of armed conflict in Europe should not be exaggerated there is no denying of the increasing tension between the various nations not only in Europe but in other continents as well. This necessitated measures for increasing the efficiency of the Dutch defence forces especially for strengthening the air force and anti-aircraft artillery.

BISHOP LANDER PASSES AWAY

Thirteen Years In Hong Kong

Deep regret will be felt locally at the passing in England of the Right Reverend Gerard Heath Lander, the fifth Bishop of Victoria (1907-1920).

A Reuter cable announced that Dr. Lander passed away suddenly at King's Cross Railway Station at noon on Wednesday.

During his thirteen years in the Colony, Bishop Lander enjoyed the esteem of a very large circle of friends both in social and in religious circles.

Twice married, the late Dr. Lander leaves a widow, three sons and two daughters, with whom much sympathy will be felt. One of the daughters married the Rev. A. D. Stewart, former Headmaster of St. Paul's Boys' College, Hong Kong, who is now Rector of Lyonsdown, a position which Dr. Lander at one time held. The other daughter is the wife of Mr. E. G. Stewart, present Principal of St. Paul's Boys' College.

Seventy-three years of age, the late Dr. Lander was educated at Newport and at Trinity College and Ridley Hall, Cambridge. His first curacy was at St. Bride's Liverpool, and he then became Vicar of St. Benedict, Everton; later Vicar of St. Philip's, Litherland; and was made Hon. Canon of Liverpool from 1904 to 1907. On leaving Hong Kong he was appointed Vicar of Holy Trinity Church, Lyonsdown, Barnet, which he held until last year. From 1923 to 1931, he was Warden of Lay Readers for the Diocese of St. Albans, and from 1924 to 1932 Assistant Bishop to the Bishop of St. Albans. He was also Proctor in Convocation from 1923 to 1931. Last year, he was appointed Archdeacon of Bedford and Assistant Bishop.

Dr. Lander had not been in the best of health lately, but he remained at his work practically to the end.

It is of interest to mention that when the Right Rev. Bishop Hall spoke at the Parish Hall in Lyonsdown just before he came to the Colony, Bishop Lander took the Chair and in the course of a speech, told the assembly that when the Archbishop of Canterbury wrote and invited Bishop Lander to come to Hong Kong, Bishop Hoare (of Hong Kong) had written to the Archbishop earlier asking that Bishop Lander be appointed his successor. Bishop Hoare was drowned in a typhoon.

LOCAL POSTAL SERVICE

New Sub-Office In Kowloon Tong

By the opening of a new postal sub-station at Waterloo Road, Kowloon Tong yesterday morning, Kowloon is still further served with quick postal deliveries of letters and in addition to receiving letters, registered mail and parcels for transmission will also be able to obtain stamps and other postal requisites.

The building, a small square structure built over a wide nullah, will be a mail distributing centre for Kowloon City, Prince Edward Road, and Kowloon Tong. Parcels, however, must be obtained from the central depot at Hong Kong.

NEW H.S.D.

Mr. W. J. Carrie
Appointed

Mr. William James Carrie has been appointed Head of the Sanitary Department and President of the Sanitary Board, with effect from November 15, according to an official communiqué issued yesterday afternoon.

Appointed a Cadet officer in 1914, Mr. Carrie has had a varied career in the Government service, and has for two periods been in charge of the Sanitary Department. He was secretary of the San. An. Pracy Commission in 1922, of the Stocks and Shares Commission in 1925 and of the Salaries Commission in 1928.

EDUCATION

Bias Towards The Practical Side

Members of the Hong Kong Teachers' Association met last night at St. Joseph's College, Kennedy Road when a very interesting presidential address was delivered by Professor L. Forster on "The Bias towards the Practical in Education." At the close of the address the professor illustrated his lecture with a number of slides showing the practical work being done in England.

In the course of his address Professor Forster said:

It is only in comparatively recent times that a successful assault has been made upon the established tradition of the schools in regard to the curriculum, for the classical and ecclesiastical system had got itself very strongly entrenched, so strongly in fact that it still sways the destinies of a great number of scholars to-day. China's educational system until recently had only one end in view, viz the creation of the classical scholar who was considered best suited for the highest government posts and likewise Europe for the most part devoted all its educational activities to the inculcation of the Greek and Latin classics, with a view to provide the church and State with the necessary clerks.

Primary education in England for a hundred years failed to find its true purpose, for the methods in use were taken over from schools of an entirely different social order and having an entirely different social problem to solve. The elementary schools in England till thirty years ago were in fact dominated by the ideals of the old Grammar Schools, although they were in an entirely different setting. The curriculum was not related to life and so its object was never grasped by those who passed through its portals.

In Germany Hitler now insists upon the young men after leaving school spending six months in a labour camp. This is a wholesome corrective to the situation which a bookish education tends to create, viz. a cleavage in society by the emergence of an intelligentsia which is divorced from those sections which are engaged in agriculture and industry. This division might reach dangerous proportions and produce a revolt such as we have witnessed in Russia, where the sickle and the hammer now proclaim the supremacy of the manual worker.

In recent years there has grown up a movement to encourage practical work among Chinese students. In Wush there is an agricultural college where the theoretical work is balanced by the land work which is performed by the students under discipline.

The demand for the inclusion of practical work in the curriculum to-day springs from several sources. According to Professor T. H. Pear, the acquisition of muscular skill is a mental activity of the highest order. Dancing, skating, designing, the rhythmic and symmetrical result achieved after arduous creative effort in clay, wood or metal are all exercises that involve the working of the brain as well as of the limbs. Froebel and Montessori in the early stages have emphasised the importance of the sense of touch and manual activity in the development of mental life. It is by such means that the child learns to co-ordinate hand and eye and to give expression to his creative instinct.

Modes of Expression
In secondary schools where we find a considerable variety of occupations, the object is not to make the youth into a wage-earning craftsman but to afford him an opportunity of finding a mode of expression best suited to his genius, as Dr. Dyson advocates.

Had Turner one of England's greatest artists being restricted to the use of words whereby to express himself, he would have gone down to posterity not as a genius but as one well below the normal level in intellect.

With the increasing number in the Secondary Schools, it is becoming urgent that variety of activity should be provided and that examinations should be modified to meet and include the growing needs of the pupils.

That five subjects should be sum and substance of the work of a high school is grotesque, or that the schools should not determine the nature of their own syllabus is absurd.

But perhaps the greatest urge in modern times towards the practical comes from the scientist and the inventor who cannot translate their experimental work in the laboratory into the practical field of everyday life unless they are supported in the factory by technicians who can work to that degree of accuracy which modern science demands.

Again work is being thrown upon the school to-day which formerly could be done in the home and in the factory during apprenticeship. Owing to the concentration of work into factories and because of the growth of towns, the ordinary home activities have been curtailed. For these reasons the school has been compelled to provide for the new situation.

But what has focussed attention recently on the problem and the need for a broader curriculum in England is the issue of the Hadow Report which proposed to give every child in England four years of secondary school education. Hitherto secondary curriculum was designed to bring the perspiring victim through the door of matriculation into the University.

There is now a desire on the part of each community to produce its own industrial wealth and if possible supply other people with the surplus. The emphasis is on economic nationalism with a corresponding demand for the type of trained worker who will be as efficient in industry as the product of the secondary school has been in commerce. Formerly industry was willing to accept those of inferior education for apprenticeship, on the assumption that the hand was far more important than the head.

Industry in China

But it is felt that industry in China now just as important as commerce and that the educational system should provide for the new demands. The rule of thumb methods and such phrases as 'Chia Pa Po' that can do which, I believe, is universal in China, are no longer permissible. The time is past when it was sufficient for an engineer in Yunnan to write that the road had to be the width of a man's shadow at sundown and that its construction would involve the removal of a grave whose distance from his house was that of the flight of an arrow aimed in the direction of the setting sun. All this is very poetical but not sufficiently accurate for modern needs.

The standard of work in any trade school depends on the previous education—the wider and more solid that foundation, the higher the standard of work in these vocational centres. It

SENTENCE REDUCED

Japanese Succeeds
In Appeal

Ikuo Nomura, who was sentenced to two years hard labour by Mr. Justice Jackson at the October Criminal Sessions, had his sentence reduced yesterday by the Criminal Court of appeal to a fine of $100 or in default two months hard labour.

In this case, which is the first appeal against sentence to come before the Court of Criminal Appeal in Hong Kong, the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. McGregor laid down some of the principles on which the Court would act.

His Lordship sat with Mr. Justice J. J. Hayden, barrister and Official Receiver, to form a Full Court. Nomura was committed from the Central Magistracy for trial on two charges—shooting with intent and unlawful possession. Only the latter charge was proceeded with at the Criminal Sessions when after hearing a plea for mitigation by Mr. D'Almada, Jr., Mr. Justice Jackson imposed sentence of two years' hard labour.

Mr. D'Almada was instructed by Messrs. Remedios D'Almada and Silva on that occasion and at the appeal to-day.

Not Opposed

Counsel for appellant said it was significant that the Crown was not represented in this action.

His Lordship: A certificate has been filed by the Attorney General to the effect that, in his opinion, the Crown should not oppose this appeal.

Mr. D'Almada said the principles on which the Court would act were as to whether the sentence was manifestly excessive or wrong in principle, the present appeal being made on both grounds. Although this was the first appeal of its nature made in Hong Kong, such appeals were often before the Court of Criminal Appeal in England.

After outlining the facts of the case as already stated counsel added that the particulars of the more serious and original charge were that on September 12, appellant discharged a shot into a room on the top floor of 87, Jaffe Road, with intent to maim certain persons who were in the room.

At the Magistracy he (counsel) had submitted that there was no prima facie case on this charge but the learned Magistrate disagreed and appellant was committed on it, the Attorney General however, subsequently deciding not to indict accused on that particular charge.

Counsel submitted that the learned Trial Judge was wrong in looking at the surrounding circumstances after the plea of guilty, as the surrounding circumstances had nothing to do with the nature of this charge. If the Judge was not wrong in this respect, he was in any event wrongly influenced by matters which he should have disregarded in passing sentence.

The charge on which appellant was indicted was a technical one to do with the bare possession of a gun without a licence. There was no suggestion that he had the gun with a view to endangering life, or as to how he came by it. Because he was originally charged with the more serious offence, appellant was sentenced on this cannot be too often stressed that practical, vocational or trade school education is not a substitute for ordinary primary education but is a specialised form that follows on this earlier training. These students learn the theory and practice in the school but in addition to that they continue Chinese studies in literature and history. A certain amount of English is taught to cover the technical words but this does not occupy a great deal of time. As an example of what is being done in England we may take London which recognises that the apprenticeship system in the old fashioned sense has come to an end as far as some trades are concerned, and that there is or was a danger of certain industries dying out for want of proper training.

Trade Schools

Hong Kong being a commercial centre with banks, import and export firms, insurance houses, shipping offices as well as Government departments required the type of student Queen's College produced and it was with this object in view that the whole education scheme in the Colony was constructed.

technical offence to two years hard labour.

The Chief Justice: If your argument is correct, why is it that the Legislature has provided a maximum sentence of ten years?

Mr. D'Almada: Because I can imagine a much more serious case where a man might have in mind other offences. He might be a gun runner.

His Lordship:—He might be on his way to commit an offence?

No indication
Mr. D'Almada: Yes, he might, but I submit that the maximum sentence is no indication as to the gravity of the offence. Certainly not a complete indication.

His Lordship said the Court was satisfied on the first point of the appeal, and the second point need not be argued. Counsel could, however, speak as to the sentence itself.

Mr. D'Almada said he had argued in appellant's favour at the Sessions that he had resided here for twenty years and had never been in trouble with the police before. He had a gun during the anti-Japanese riots, when he received a head injury, and he submitted that he had probably retained the gun in fear of a repetition of the riots. The fact that he had no licence could be attributed to the poor financial state of many small Japanese traders here since the riots. Appellant had been in custody since September 12 and for the past month had had the sentence of two years' hard labour hanging over his head. He submitted that the offence could be met with a fine or a short term of imprisonment, say one day, which would take into consideration the time he had already been in prison.

The Chief Justice

The Chief Justice, after reviewing the law on the case, said:— "We are unable to resist the conclusion that had these facts (as to good character) been impressed on the mind of the learned Trial Judge, he would have arrived at a different assessment of sentence. The sentence is a very severe one and it may be that it proceeded from the assumption that the defendants might have stood his trial and have been convicted, on a serious felony. Such an assumption, not only in view of the evidence in the depositions to which I have already referred but also in view of the recent judgment quoted by Mr. D'Almada, is not justified.

Sentence Reduced

"The sentence of the Trial Judge is quashed and a fine of $100 is imposed instead; in default of payment, the sentence of the Court is two months' imprisonment with hard labour.

"In this latter event, sentence would run from the date of the determination of sentence by the Court of Criminal Appeal, except in cases where the Court decrees otherwise. It is an appropriate moment to state that this Court will, in general, follow the common practice in England, and refrain from making any special directions but in this case, in our opinion, the justice of the case could properly be met by a fine, the default term will date from the date of conviction."

That is why we have one Government school for Chinese girls and nine for Chinese boys.

Hong Kong now has its Trade School, its Technical School and its Industrial School, with another building for industrial training approaching completion at Aberdeen. The aim of the Trade School is to raise the standard of efficiency in the local industries—in engineering and in building construction. The object of the Industrial Schools is primarily to give such skill to a youth as will render him as quickly as possible economically independent. In Secondary Schools, where woodwork, metal work, embroidery and other crafts are taught the aim is to furnish for those whose genius lies that way, a mental training through skilled operations with the hands in producing articles that have a high aesthetic value. The extension of such work in the Colony is inevitable and will in years to come be found in schools which in their activities will reflect the needs of the New Territories by having an agricultural bias or in the city by having a trade bias.

HONG KONG, NOVEMBER 16, 1934.

NONRESISTENT HONG KONG.

Are we suffering in this Colony from depression mania? So many things are attributed to the bad state of trade that one seldom goes to a business meeting to-day without being reminded that "times are not what they used to be, and one has got to be careful." While caution seems to be the keynote everywhere, it is questionable whether it will ever lead the Colony out of the depression. Admittedly when returns show a definite falling off in business, instinct prompts a business man to prune expenses and watch the outflow of money, but this policy is not always the best answer to bad business, especially at a time when a depression hangs over the Colony. It seems to us that, with "caution" the keynote everywhere, the revival of trade is being unnecessarily delayed. Some time ago in our columns we discussed the reason for the fall in share prices, and it was pointed out that the want of confidence in local stocks was one of the main causes for the decline in prices.

As in the share market, so in other directions there is a want of confidence in the Colony and this feeling must be overcome if we are to break the depression instead of allowing the depression to break us.

Let us deviate from the subject for a while. Recently one of the local theatres showed us "The House of Rothschild." Their enterprise was well rewarded from the support given them by the public. There was no sign of depression watching the King's Theatre emptying its patrons after each performance. The moral to be learned from this is that the people in Hong Kong will spend money, but only when they feel that they are getting their money's worth. And only enterprise and initiative can induce them to think so. Practically every foreign resident in the Colony must have seen the picture and what a tonic it is, in these days, to see, even for an hour or so, someone who refuses to be beaten by adverse circumstances.

Well might the Colony adopt as its slogan the words, "Buy, Buy." Why are our property and our share markets on an unending decline? Is there, no one in our midst with sufficient confidence in the future of this Colony to come out in the open and pick up all the sacrificial sales that are being made daily? It will be a Herculean task, but it is a task not without reward, for apart from restoring confidence in the Colony, it may have the effect of bringing up prices all round. Thousands of people who have invested their savings in the Colony's Ralio, or have placed it on landed estate, find their savings dwindling as butter in the hot sun. Is there no Rothschild in our midst who could save the situation by displaying a little courage and initiative?

"The darkest hour is just before the dawn." Other places have had their share of the world depression and have emerged from it. Hong Kong's problems at the present moment are admittedly complicated, and the future does not seem rosy, but who is there to say that the future will not be as glorious as the Colony's past, or even more so? Certainly the opportunity is here to get in at the bottom. It remains to be seen to what extent the community will use this opportunity.

BANDIT DRIVE SUCCESSES

Congratulations To Leaders

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).]
Nanchang, Nov. 15.

A telegram under the signature of 183 guilds throughout the country congratulates General Chiang Kai Shek, Chairman of the Military Affairs Commission, Chiang Ting Wen, Commander-in-Chief of the Eastern Route Bandit Suppression Forces, and General Li Mo Han, Commander of the Tenth Division, on the recent successes in the Communist drive and recapture of Juichin, for six years the Red Capital. The message urges the pursuance of the present advantage with a view to the early conclusion of the campaign to relieve the suffering of the populace.

While the civil authorities intensify the relief activities in Juichin, the Government forces continue to advance against the retreating Communists. The blockade of foodstuffs and salt in the bandit area has been tightened. Early collapse of the Communists is expected owing to reported dissatisfaction between Chow Lun Lai and Mao Che Tung, important leaders, owing to Chow's anxiety for the evacuation of Kiangsi to join the Szechuan Reds and Mao's severe reverses at the Government's hands.

After handing over to the Kiangsi troops the garrison stations in South Kiangsi, the Kwangtung forces rushed to Northern Kwangtung to check the bandits' attempt to enter the Province. General Chen Chi Tang, chief of the Southern Route, arrived at Chackwan to personally direct the drive on the Kwangtung-Hunan border and is co-operating with the Hunan military authorities.

WATER-COLOUR ART

Exhibitions In London

[Special Air Mail Service]
London, Oct. 28.

In these days when art is inclined to be rational, it is not dogmatic, the paintings and water-colours by the late Charles Conder (1868-1909) now on view at the Beaux Arts Gallery, Bruton Place, come back rather pleasantly. It would be difficult to imagine a less intellectual kind of painting or one that rested more directly upon sensibility—though a limited sensibility. To say that Conder was very little interested in form would be to deny his gifts as a designer, but it is true that colour and substantial quality were his chief means of expression. There are 54 works in the exhibition, the majority of them being oil paintings, which is rather surprising. "Les Esclaves" and "The Swing" are two good examples, though "Children in an Orchard," in blossom, has a special appeal, but it is questionable if the essence of Conder was not distilled upon silk, and the little oval, "At the Races," is as good as anything in the exhibition.

At the same gallery there is an exhibition of 28 water-colours, mostly in Provence, by Mr. Frederic Lessore, who is best known as a sculptor. They hang extremely well together, owing to the wise reduction of colour to a formal scheme, and they are pleasantly free in handling. "Avignon," "Villeneuve-Avignon, vue generale," and "Park Lane" may be quoted. Included in the exhibition is a statue, by the same artist, in wood, painted, of "St. Pancras," for the Church of the Holy Redeemer, Clerkenwell, which was designed by Sedding. The style of the work, that of broad simplification, was conditioned by the circumstance that the statue is to balance an existing one of the Madonna. The colour scheme, grey-blue tunic and gold hair, the gold being repeated in the neckband and girdle and carried down the sword to the pedestal is admirable for the purpose and consistent with the formal treatment.

Mr. Adrian Daintrey

The water-colours by Mr. Adrian Daintrey at the Adams Brothers' Gallery, 2, Pall Mall Place, have the charm of work which looks as if it had been done easily. Apart from design, they depend entirely upon tricks of intonation—using the words to include colour as well as tone values—and it is the possession of this gift which enables the artist to work freely and openly and yet seem complete. "Giri Seated," in which line is used freely, is a very attractive drawing with a classical flavour, and other particularly good ones are "Brock Street, Bath," "Horse and Cart," "Bosham Harbour," and "Low Tide, Hayling Island."

GREAT BRITAIN AND INDIA

Select Committee's Report

[Special Air-Mail Service].
London, Oct. 28.

The Joint Select Committee's report on India will be published on November 23. On Wednesday week—the second day after the reassembling of Parliament—a motion will be submitted by the Government asking the House to sanction the simultaneous publication of the report in Great Britain and India. This, I understand, will be the first time a Parliamentary paper has been published simultaneously in England and in another part of the Empire, which explains why the express approval of Parliament has to be obtained for the publication.

The present session of Parliament will be brought to an end, if all goes well, with the remaining legislation, on November 16, and the Joint Select Committee's report must be laid on the table of the House before the prorogation. Between then and the 23rd, the date of publication, the elections to the Indian Provincial Legislatures take place, and even if it were possible to publish the report before that date there would be an understandable reluctance to throwing the report into the elections. All the returns for the elections will have been received by the 23rd.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER

(BY "NO QUARTER")

Braves and Gallants! It is high November, and yet that surly grumbler the weather persists in a mouldy black frown. The weather clerk must have a liver like a football. It isn't really fair on us. When the sun is shining and the skies are clear, nothing could be easier than to make people give gargantuan shouts of laughter. But under these rainy clouds they have no humour left; as my choicest efforts, (which, as you know, are almost excruciatingly funny) they produce a wintry smile like a bowl of unripe rhubarb.

Still, one must take the large view, as the bishop said when he played strip-poker with Mae West.

SICK STEEDS

Members of the Coterie Club, well-known for its community luncheons, were given a rare treat on Wednesday when they were addressed by Mr. "Shifty" Loyne, prominent local equestrian and sportsman.

Mr. Loyne's subject was: "Lumbar diseases among temperate and undersized horses." He spoke for over an hour on this absorbing topic, and all of us learned much about the maladies to which our dumb friends are subject. Which of us, for example, had any idea that grey horses are usually martyrs to measles, or that mares are more liable than horses to Bright's disease, and shingles.

"Generally speaking," said Mr. Loyne, "the filly—bless 'em—keep pretty fit and well, apart from the odd spavin, don't you know. I remember when I ran the Blue Lion at Aylesbury—"

Mr. Loyne went on to tell a distressing tale of a horse, which although not fast, was afflicted with galloping halitosis. Even his stable companions would not tell him. He eventually won the Derby as no other horse would go within 10 yards of him.

NEW YUGOSLAV CABINET

M. Ouzounovitch In Office

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, Oct. 28.

After two audiences of the Regents at the Dednye Palace, M. Ouzounovitch was successful in completing his Cabinet late last night. Only three new Ministers have been included in it. General Peter Zhivkovitch, the Commander of the Royal Guard, becomes Minister of War in place of General Miliovanovich, who is the only man who quits the Cabinet. The former Prime Minister, Dr. Marinovitch and Dr. Gershtitch, become Ministers without portfolio.

All Ministers were sworn in by half an hour after midnight.

With the exception of General Zhivkovitch, the Cabinet is made up of men of the Yugoslav official party. The Opposition is not represented.

In a dispatch sent before the formation of the new Cabinet, our Vienna Correspondent stated that M. Ouzounovitch's efforts did not prosper as the leaders of the proscribed parties, who have suffered long imprisonment for their beliefs, were antagonized by the slighting references to the old parties in the statement he made.

The general feeling in Belgrade (the Vienna dispatch continued) is that what is wanted at this juncture is not merely a reshuffled Ouzounovitch Cabinet composed of members of the official parties, but a Cabinet on a broader basis, including the leaders of the proscribed parties, or at least of those parties which have accepted the present Constitution and have responded to the call for national unity, which is the primary need in these difficult times.

Father Koroshetz, the leader of the Slovene Clerical Party, and Dr. Mehmed Spaho, the Moslem Party leader, are not prepared to enter the Cabinet without the Radicals. These Opposition leaders, apart from their resentment at M. Ouzounovitch's attack on the old parties, were not satisfied with what he was prepared to offer them—namely, one or two seats in the Cabinet without portfolios.

M. Ouzounovitch, in a statement said that nobody would be considered in the formation of the new Cabinet, who did not accept without reservation the policy hitherto pursued by the Government.

The fundamental principles which everybody must accept were, he said, the monarchy and dynasty of Karaagevich, the unity of the State and nation, the Constitution, the existing administrative divisions, the foreign policy based on peace and on the support of friendly and allied countries, and, finally, the maintenance of the status quo fixed by the Peace Treaties. As to the old parties, they had, he said, played their part and were done with. They had been dissolved and would never be allowed again. The old politicians must forget the former party divisions, because unity was now more necessary than ever.

IMPERIAL DEFENCE DEBATE A NEW NAVAL TREATY PROPOSAL

Lord Hailsham Outlines British Policy

PLAN TO INCREASE AIR FORCE

Hong Kong-Singapore Route Survey In Hand

London, Nov. 14. At the Imperial Defence Debate in the House of Lords, Lord Hailsham emphasised the necessity of an adequate army, and gave details of the progress which was being made with the programme to increase the air force, announced on July 19.

He mentioned that £80,000 was being spent on the Singapore Air Base and £50,000 on the Air Base at Hong Kong. A squadron of flying boats were surveying an air route between Singapore and Hong Kong.

He said that the possibilities of dealing with enemy bombers were much greater than at the end of the war. The Government's policy was directed at reducing the risk of attack as far as possible.

They would continue to strain every nerve to produce an atmosphere of tranquillity whereby international disarmament might be achieved, but, meanwhile they could not disregard their responsibilities and unilaterally disarm.

NAVAL POSITION
Referring to the naval talks, he said that it was impossible to give definite information while the conversations were in progress. "The whole of our naval position is being most carefully considered in relation to our absolute requirements," Lord Hailsham said.

The Government hoped, he added, to replace the naval agreement which would lapse in 1936 by an agreement which would avoid competition in naval armaments and leave Great Britain free to maintain only a fleet of necessary strength.

They would have to consider and discuss the question of quantitative and qualitative disarmament, Lord Hailsham said, but nobody need be under any misapprehension with regard to the imperative necessity of maintaining a fleet adequate to secure British naval communications.

CAPITAL SHIPS
Earl Beatty asked whether battleships were a vital part of the Fleet, and if so, what the Government intended to do.

Lord Hailsham replied that capital ships were an essential element in the Battle Fleet, on which the whole structure of naval policy depended. He added that the number of cruisers required to provide adequately for sea communications was "a matter for most serious consideration."

Madrid, November 15. The text of the new law submitted by Lerroux to Cortes provides for the temporary administration of Catalonia. The functions of the Generalidad conferred by the Statute of Catalonia has been suspended until the Parliamentary elections have taken place, but it is distinctly stipulated that these provisions must not be kept inoperative for more than three months after the state of siege has been discontinued. During the interim the powers of the President and the Executive Committee of the Generalidad will be exercised by the Spanish Government which will confer them upon the Deputy. Within fourteen days the Spanish Government will appoint a commission to inquire into the administrative activity of the Generalidad with the object of deciding which functions will in future be discharged by the Generalidad and which by the Central Government.

DOUMERGUE VISITS TARDIEU

(Special Air Mail Service)
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, November 15, 7.30 p.m.)

Paris, Nov. 15. Before leaving Paris on Thursday morning by automobile for home in Tournefeuille, Doumergue visited his old cabinet colleague, Tardieu in the clinic where the ex-Minister is recovering from the effects of a recent operation. In political circles Tardieu is regarded as the real auditor of Doumergue's plans for constitutional reform. When offered a portfolio in Flandin's cabinet, Tardieu declined because the new premier has postponed the consideration of Doumergue's proposals for reforming the legislature, at the same time remarking it is said "My time has not yet come."

The result of Doumergue's visit on Thursday was that it became known that next week Tardieu's book on state reform will appear.

A NEW GERMAN DIRIGIBLE

Trial Trips Next Summer

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Friedrichshafen, Nov. 13. It is reported that the new German dirigible L.G. 129, now under construction, will already be completed next summer and then take up trial trips between Europe and North-America. Dr. Eckener, the well-known German airman, has on his recent visit to U.S.A. succeeded in securing definite support of American government circles for his plan to inaugurate regular air traffic routes round the world.

Following a reception by President Roosevelt and a lecture before the American Aviation Commission, the Naval Minister Swanson promised to give him his fullest support for the trial trips of L.G. 129 and has put all naval aerodromes at the disposal of the German air-cruiser.

Also a regular traffic between Holland and Dutch-Indies is contemplated and in connection with this plan a Dutch commission of experts will shortly pay a visit to Friedrichshafen.

The completion of L.G. 129 will be immediately followed by a construction of further dirigibles.

To Replace The Washington Arrangement

London, November 15.

A new naval treaty replacing the Washington Treaty is indicated as probable as the outcome of the naval talks. The question was put to the American delegates by the British yesterday to prepare the grounds for such a treaty. These questions have been referred to Washington. The American delegates are now awaiting instructions from President Roosevelt.

American circles are apparently optimistic as regards the prospects of the new course outlined by the British yesterday.

London, Nov. 15. The new naval treaty would involve concessions for every country retaining the 5-5-3 ratio, giving Japan equality in principle and limiting capital ships to 32,000 tons, and giving Britain 70 cruisers on which she had throughout insisted.

Yesterday's talk between the British and American delegates was centred on the situation which would arise after Japan abrogates the Washington Treaty. In reshuffling the categories, an attempt will be made to give each Power as much as possible of its demands which might entail more submarines for Japan, more big battleships and aircraft carriers for America, and more cruisers for Britain.

It is understood in American delegation circles that America expects to make a concession in the latter direction.

DELICATE ISSUES
London, Nov. 15. The British and American naval delegates met for three and a half hours to pick up according to British circles the "loose ends" or points not directly related to Japan.

The Americans told the Press that they had been requested by the British officials to maintain silence concerning the conversations. Secrecy is assumed to mean that the discussion has led to delicate issues.

The Americans gathered that the British appeared to be divided, some seeking to placate Japan at any price and others standing with the Americans. British circles categorically deny the talks justify the American impression that the British are divided among themselves.

There is a rumour that the oil companies will attempt to retaliate by refusing to quote for the requirements of the Manchuria Petroleum Company's Dairen Refinery and it is generally discredited that the oil companies are particularly anxious to settle the controversy amicably.

GERMAN-POLISH RELATIONS

Important Factor Towards Peace

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Berlin, Nov. 14.

The favourable progress made in the German-Polish relations during the last year was designated by Josef Lipski, hitherto the Polish Minister to Berlin, as doubtless one of the most important factors towards the establishment of European peace, in a speech when he presented his credentials to Hitler on Wednesday, following his appointment as Ambassador. The recent decision of the German and Polish Governments to raise their respective legislations in Warsaw and Berlin to the status of embassies was an expression of this satisfactory development, said Lipski, adding that he considered it an high honour to be able to continue his work in a new capacity for the rapprochement between the two nations.

In also expressing gratification at the new development in the relations between the two countries, Hitler, in reply, said "in view of the numerous difficulties in the European situation at the present time the new orientation of our relationships is a matter of the highest importance, and the results hitherto achieved only strengthen our determination to proceed further in this path to co-operate more closely in various fields."

Referring to the economic questions, the Chancellor said that Germany will willingly do all that is possible to overcome the difficulties that caused the present crisis and to promote exchange of goods between Poland and Germany.—Transocean Kuo Min.

CANTON TRADE NEWS

Silver Export

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Canton, Nov. 15.

To prevent the export of silver from Canton, the Provincial Department of Finance has reaffirmed the embargo on silver coins. However, individuals may export not more than $20 each. This ruling has been in force before the increase of export tariff on silver coins as announced by the Nanking Government.

The customs notification states that duty on silver will be waived if the export by each passenger is $2 for foreign countries or $5 for coastwise movements. The above exemptions have been designed with the object of eliminating the grounds for justifiable complaint from genuine travelling public, but it is not intended that the benefits shall be enjoyed by cargo runners, who are to be called upon to pay duty on every item of dutiable cargo carried by them however small.

Protection Fee Abolished. Owners of tow-boats have succeeded in petitioning the authorities to abolish the protection tax of $15 a day levied on each tow-boat by the Harbour Administration Office, an organ of the Provincial Department of Finance.

The petitioners went to the Kwantung Provincial Government to ask for abolition of this tax, but to make sure that this levy will be cancelled the petitioners proceeded to the headquarters of the First Group Army and were received by General Chen Tsai Tong, the Commander-in-Chief. After considering the matter, General Chen recommends the Provincial Government to abolish this tax as compassion to the tow-boat owners.

The Restaurant Tax

After considerable arguments, the tea shop proprietors have succeeded in convincing the authorities in exempting the restaurant tax on small courses served in tea shops, provided each course is not more than 20 cents.

Restaurants are paying 18.5 per cent. ad valorem on each diner's bill. They are complaining that the tea shops are taking away their business by offering small courses. Now to avoid payment of this tax, such courses as offered by the tea shops must be not more than 20 cents. Hearty eaters have to patronize the restaurants for more substantial courses notwithstanding the tax.

BUSINESS TAX IN CANTON

British Opposition Supported

London, Nov. 14.

Replying to questions concerning the taxation of British subjects by the Chinese Government, Mr. Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, in the House of Commons, reviewed the legal position and the general situation.

He remarked that demands had recently been made on foreign nationals in China, including Britons, who owned property in Greater Shanghai, for the payment of land values taxes.

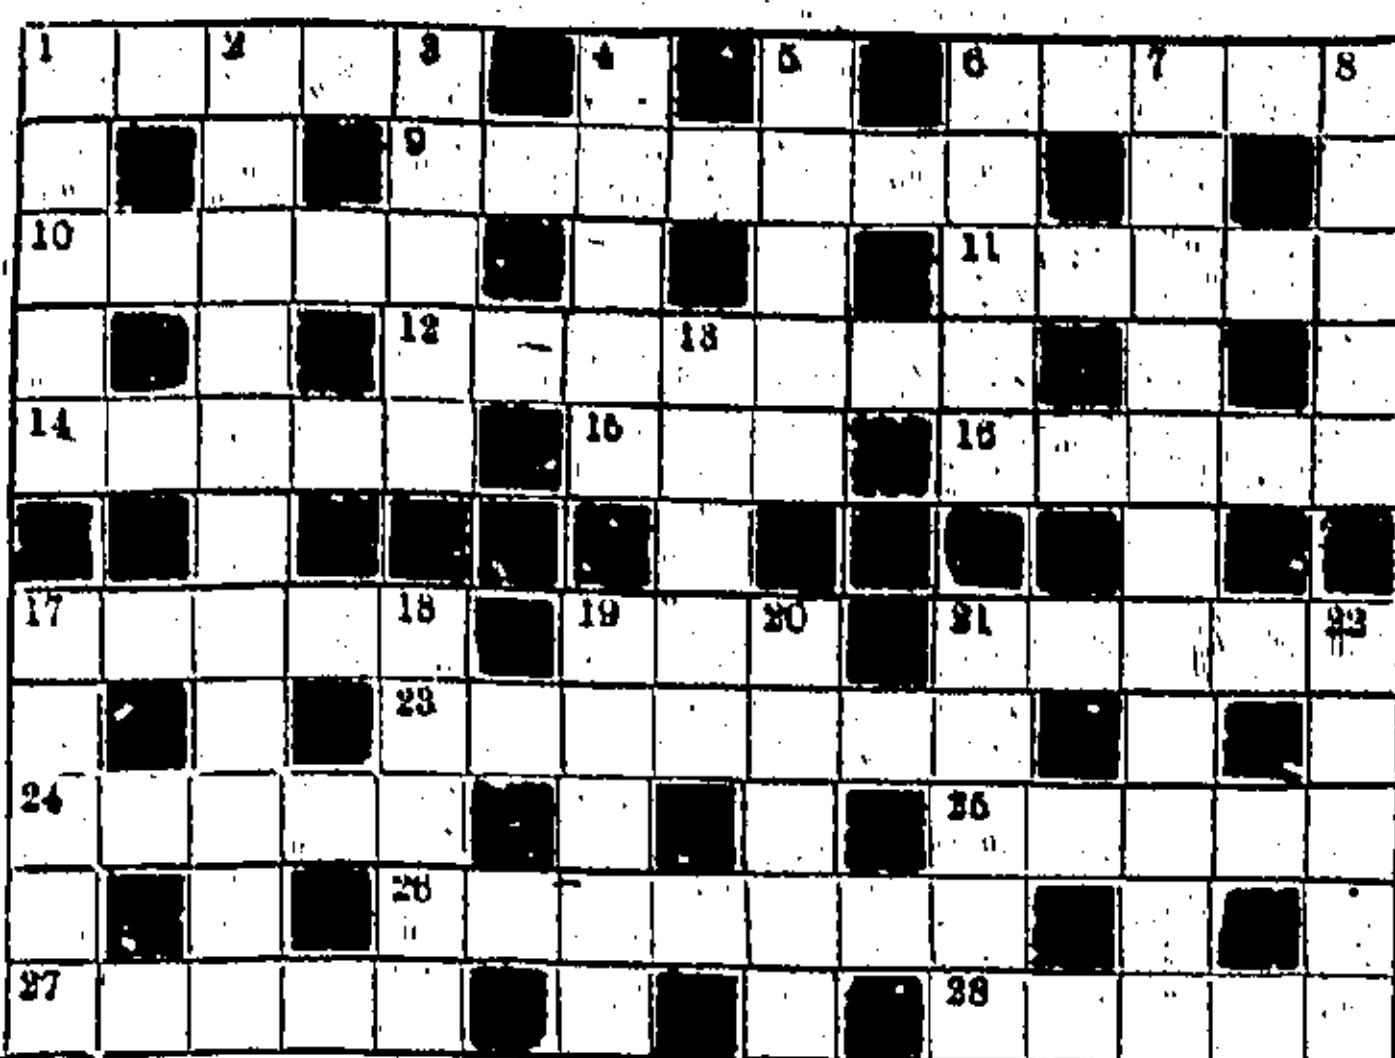

"As the tax is legal under Chinese law, non-discriminatory and reasonable in amount, and is generally paid by Chinese, British subjects have been advised that effective support cannot be guaranteed to them in the event of their getting into difficulties with the Chinese authorities through non-payment of the tax," he added.

With regard to the business tax demanded in various places, including Canton, Mr. Eden stated that as the regulations had generally been vexatious and impractical in character, with unfair and irregular methods of assessment and enforcement by arbitrary executive action rather than by law, British merchants resisting had been afforded the fullest possible support by the British representatives.—Reuter.

The medium of instruction in such schools will be Chinese which is the language of Agriculture and Industry as English is the language of Commerce.

But the efficiency and quality of the Trade Schools and Technical Colleges depends on the foundations, on which this superstructure of specialised knowledge is built. In this Colony it would mean the creation of an efficient system of Vernacular schools, with a modern curriculum of study, staffed by properly qualified Teachers. The staffing of the Trade School itself presents a difficult problem for the right combination of technical skill, teaching ability and culture is not easily found.

Practical Work

Hong Kong as one of the newer Universities has done much to advance the dignity of practical work by showing how wide its ramifications are and how complex and scientific its applications can be. If the University could extend its facilities to include not only an engineering department but also an architectural side and a department of fine arts then the range would be complete and the working man would come to realise that while he himself might not be able to reach such heights, yet he was engaged in an industry that had highly respectable connections.

The claims of practical work of every type have been urged in schools because such work is beneficial to the character. Over the door of the Manual Training School in Leipzig there is the following verse:—

Train well the hand and teach the eye to see Firm grows the will,
Sound shall the judgment be.

There is no better object lesson in morals for the student than his performance in wood or metal. The result is concrete and convincing and is a warning against shuffling evasion and dishonesty. A lie in wood or iron stands self-exposed, for there is no escape from the judgment of the rule.

We must not however as Teachers overstate the case or we shall defeat our own ends. Manual work is a form of expression and one form only. It is capable of rising into the highest realms of art as Chippendale and Szefer have shown in their treatment of furniture, as Wedgwood has shown in the making of pottery, as the Chinese workman has himself demonstrated in a remarkable de-

SMITH BEATS NEWMAN

In Series Of Short Games

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Oct. 26.

W. Smith beat T. Newman in the series of short games at Thurston's Hall in Leicester-square by 13 games to 11. At the start of the play the scores were level, but Smith won by 197, his average being 50 and Newman's 38.

Smith was the first to secure an opening, and playing his usual all-round game, in which hazard striking predominated, he scored 175 when he missed an ordinary long loser. In response Newman made 133, but he was always struggling and it was not surprising when he missed a cushion cannon.

Smith replied with 59, and during some safety play Newman found an opportunity to make a run of 64, at the end of which he missed a cannon. Smith, who was then leading by 56, increased his advantage with successive runs of 84, 63, and 18, but a break of 207, which included a sequence of 58 close cannons, enabled Newman to get in front for the first time. Later, however, Smith was the more consistent, and with breaks of 87 and 272 (unfinished) against Newman's best of 160, the Dartington player won well. The result was:—

Smith	800
Newman	603
Smith was successful again at night by 200 points. He had an average of 97, making breaks of 134, 58, and 583, while Newman, whose average was 54, made runs of 152 (57 cannons), 60, and 326. The result was:—
Smith	800
Newman	600

gree in porcelain, lacquer work, brass work, embroidery and blackwood; but there are other modes of expression more flexible, less static, more capable of producing the finer shades of difference in meaning, and less restricted in scope. Language and literature will always occupy the highest position in the esteem of mankind and therefore in the curriculum of the ordinary school, for they are the vehicle of man's thought, his philosophy and his ideals and it is through them that he has achieved his lofty position as a rational being.

NAZI CHARGES

About Air Race

(Special Air Mail Service)

Berlin, Oct. 27.

Three days after the start of the air race to Melbourne the "Angriff" the newspaper founded by Dr. Goebbels, the Propaganda Minister, has seen fit to publish, in a dispatch from London, allegations about the last-minute decision of Colonel Fitzmaurice not to start with his Bellanca machine. The stewards in charge of the race are roundly accused of excluding the Bellanca with the object of ensuring that the race should be won by a British machine and British pilots. The facts regarding the weight of the machine and the two conflicting certificates of airworthiness are not mentioned.

The writer explains the nervousness of the British competitors before the American challenge as due to the fact that Colonel Fitzmaurice accomplished, with a German pilot the East-to-West flight to Newfoundland in April, 1928. The message concludes with a reference to English protests against the results of the Test Matches and the America's Cup Race.

In all other Berlin newspapers the performance of the winning aeroplane and airmen is generously applauded as a magnificent feat, and detailed descriptions of the flight are given on the front page.

When the allegations of the "Angriff" were brought to the notice of Commander H. E. Perrin, Secretary of the Royal Aero Club, last night, he said: "Colonel

BERNARD SHAW

Not Lecturing To Fabian Society

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Oct. 26.

For the first time for almost twenty years Mr. Bernard Shaw is not speaking at the autumn lectures of the Fabian Society, which begin at the end of this month at the Friends' House, Euston Road. It has been a Fabian and a Shavian tradition that the last lecture of the series should be delivered by Mr. Shaw. For several years now he has been saying that he was getting too old and must give it up, and this year he has put the threat into execution.

As last year he was able to speak for an hour and a half almost without notes, his decay at the age of seventy-eight cannot be taken too seriously. For the past few years this Fabian speech has been Mr. Shaw's only regular annual engagement. Since both Lord Passfield and his wife have also ceased speaking at these meetings for the last two years, though they still take the chair, with Mr. Shaw's passing, the old guard of the Fabian Society have surrendered to the new. This year's speakers include Sir Stafford Cripps and Miss Ellen Wilkinson, and Mr. Harold Laski is taking Mr. Shaw's place at the end.

Fitzmaurice was not disqualified from the race, he withdrew. There is not a word of truth in the suggestion.

NEW YORK STOCK AND COMMODITY QUOTATIONS

AMERICAN ORIENTAL FINANCE CORPORATION AND S. E. LEVY & CO.

New York, Nov. 14.

The American Oriental Finance Corporation's report through their New York agents, Messrs. E. A. Pierce & Co., states:—

Stocks:—Liquidation of utility issues has continued owing to fears of lower rates, but selected industrials were firm to strong, mainly because of favourable dividend action and earnings prospects.

Wheat:—To-day, the market was much the same as yesterday, heavy early in the session, but firm later. Trade was moderate, with strength derived from the corn market. The easiness of the foreign markets is offsetting reports of dry weather here.

Cotton:—There was a little more Southern selling, which was taken by the Trade and Liverpool. The market was small, but the tone was steady, reflecting the improved business in the cotton-goods markets during the past week.

Rubber:—There was a sharp sell-off, due to hedging by dealers and heavy shipments of the commodity. Factories have not been buying as had been expected. General liquidation by Commission Houses uncovered stop-loss orders.

New York, Nov. 14.

Messrs. S. E. Levy & Company's agents, Messrs. White, Weld & Co., report, through their New York office states:—

Stocks:—We still believe that any reaction should be utilized for purchases. Business done: 960,000 shares.

Bonds:—United States Government bonds were unchanged. High-grades were fractionally better, with buying interest increasing. Second-grade issues were easier.

Grains:—Barring any temporary technical setbacks, the trend of the market, especially corn, looks higher. Total sales: Wheat, 19,519,000 bushels; Corn, 18,391,000 bushels.

Cotton:—There is a feeling that liquidation of December cotton will increase. Sentiment was mixed.

Rubber:—Speculative liquidation uncovered stop-loss orders. November arrivals so far, have been on a very small scale. We prefer scaledown purchases. Total sales: 615 lots.

S.E. Levy & Co.'s Cables

The following cables were received last night by Messrs. S. E. Levy and Co.:

Favourable factors prior to the opening of the markets:—(1) Indications that industry will be allowed more independence by the Administration and talk of vigorous recovery drive by big business during the coming months is arousing the interest of Wall Street. (2) Weekly electricity production totals 1,878,000,000 K.W. hours, an increase of 3.6 per cent. from the corresponding period of last year.

Unfavourable factors were:—(1) It is understood that the unsettled conditions in Europe resulted in very little stock market business here. (2) Petroleum daily average production totalled 2,375,000 barrels, an increase of 9,000 barrels from last week.

London Silver:—Spot 24-3/4, unchanged; Forward 24-7/8, unchanged.

Silver Comment:—India bought, China sold business small Market closed steady.

LATE NIGHT CABLES

The following cables were received last night by the American Oriental Finance Corporation and Messrs. S. E. Levy and Co.:

London Forecast:

Cotton:—Cotton may open steady. It is reported that spinning machinery purchased during 1934 exceeds that of the entire total for the past three years.

Stocks:—Little change is expected in prices and in sentiment on Wall Street with business remaining small.

Rubber:—Rubber is expected to open better.

Wheat:—Wheat is a two-sided market. The Argentine crop report is conflicting while weather conditions in the South-west continue dry which is also a factor. Prices should be slightly higher.

A.O.F.C. New York Cables

Stocks:—The recent industrial firmness despite utility weakness is very impressive. There was a slightly higher and active opening. The opinion is growing that the Administration is emphasizing recovery rather than reform.

Cotton:—The South is a moderate seller. December liquidation continues. Liverpool and the domestic trade are buyers.

and that he "fumbled about with it."

Was any charge made against you?—None whatever. I asked the chairman what I was charged with, and I got no reply.

Later he attended a meeting of boxing referees, one of whom asked him if he had prejudged the contest, and added, "Do you know there were men at the ring side long before the contest took place betting that it would be a draw?"

MATT WELLS LICENCE

Withdrawn By Boxing Board

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Oct. 26.

Mr. Matt Wells, the boxing referee, was the plaintiff in an action against the British Boxing Board of Control before Mr. Justice Avory, in the King's Bench Division.

He sought to test the validity of the action of the Board (Col. R. E. Myddleton and five others) in withdrawing his licence after the heavy-weight contest at the Albert Hall on March 13, 1933, between Don McCorkindale, the South African, and Walter Neusel, the German.

Mr. Wells referred and declared the fight a draw.

Serjeant Sullivan, K.C. (for Mr. Wells), said a declaration was claimed that the withdrawal of Mr. Wells's licence by the Board was illegal. He also sought an injunction to restrain the Board from acting upon their decision. The defence was that, under the Board's rules, they were justified.

"Mr. Wells, in his young days, when his circumference was less, was a champion boxer in his class, and a professional boxer for many years," counsel continued. "Since then he has acted as referee at boxing contests."

The question for the Court was: Did the Board impute that Mr. Wells had been guilty of some misconduct that unfitted him to remain a referee?

BOARD AND FAIR PLAY

If, in the publication by the Board of their decision, there was an imputation reflecting on the integrity of Mr. Wells, it was a libel on him, as there was no suggestion that any man was ever entitled to make an allegation of dishonesty or lack of integrity against Mr. Wells.

After hearing the evidence the jury might come to the conclusion that the Board, whose rules aimed at securing fair play in the ring, might themselves have to learn something about fair play.

Mr. Wells had acted as referee in a great number of championship contests, and was on the "star" list of the Boxing Board's referees.

Dealing with the fight in question, Serjeant Sullivan said it was a very poor one. For a number of rounds neither McCorkindale nor Neusel did anything of note, and the crowd became extremely restive.

In Matt Wells's opinion it was not a question of who was the better boxer, but who was the worse? He came to the conclusion that they were equal, and declared the match a draw.

That that was an honest and straightforward verdict was not disputed. A number of people thought it was wrong and a number thought it was right, and there was a considerable disturbance in the hall.

"One of the mysteries in the case," continued Serjeant Sullivan, "is that: Who, behind the screen of the eminently respectable board, has been attacking Matt Wells? His anonymous accuser remains unknown to the present moment."

Mr. Wells's explanation of his verdict of a draw was that, in his opinion, the fight ought never to have taken place, as neither boxer was in form for a first-class contest. One of them, in his view, had the flu, and the other had a damaged wrist.

INCOMPETENCE ALLEGED

Mr. Wells pressed for some indication of the misconduct of which it was alleged he had been adjudged "guilty." Finally, a month after the withdrawal of his licence, he was informed that the board was dissatisfied with his explanation of his refereeing of the fight, and that his licence was withdrawn on the ground of incompetence.

Giving evidence, Mr. Wells said he was light-weight amateur champion for four years, and in 1911, when he was 28, and a professional, he won the light-weight championship of Great Britain. He was now a licensed victualler, and, since 1921, had been refereeing first-class fights.

The fight referred to was a poor contest, and a draw was his honest opinion of the result. Both men scored equal points, but afterwards he either lost or mislaid his score card.

When he appeared before the board a steward told him that he was seen to use a pencil with a rubber end to mark the score card.

THE SHIPPING REVIVAL

Unused Liners Back Into Service

When an improvement in shipping has been repeatedly suggested during the past few years, seafaring people living in Tyneside have been bitterly sceptical. But now, they are taking heart again.

It has been officially announced lately that ships in the River Tyne which have been idle for years are to get under way again. The Blue Star liner Stuart Star, together with the Essex Lance and Essex Envoy (the last two mentioned ships have been laid up in the Tyne for four years) are under definite commission. These ships carry 100 men and officers who have been unemployed.

It is believed that other idle steamers in the Tyne are to receive commissions within the next few days. Dare we hope for a revival in Tyneside shipping?

PERAK RIVER REORGANIZATION

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Oct. 28.
Presiding at the annual meeting of the Perak River Hydro-Electric Power Company, Mr. George Balfour, M.P., was able to claim that his forecast of a year ago that net revenue would be at least doubled in 1933-34 had been fulfilled. The company has, in fact, increased its net revenue by 126 per cent., and, moreover, progress is expected to continue during the current year, although not perhaps at the same rate as in the previous year. Now that economic conditions in Malaya are regarded as having become more stable, the directors of the power company feel that the time is approaching when plans may be prepared to reorganize the company's finances. In indicating the broad lines which such a scheme was likely to follow, Mr. Balfour said it should make provision for the elimination of the Prior Lien at the earliest date, and, subject to that date, the Five per Cent. Guaranteed stock should be the only loan or debenture charge be the scheme coming into force. The share capital structure should provide for future capital for proper development and, in addition, provide power to issue capital for the acquisition of properties of sufficient revenue-producing capacity, and must also deal with outstanding loans, Participating Debentures, and Preference and Or-

LENA GOLDFIELDS HOPES

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Oct. 28.
For some time now rumours of a settlement of the Lena Goldfields dispute with the Soviet Government have been spreading in the City.

The rumours have a basis. This is the present position:

In June of this year Mr. Arthur Marshall, the chairman of the British Engineering Company of Siberia, went to Moscow to discuss the situation with the Soviet authorities.

After drafting a scheme of settlement, which he believed to be acceptable to both parties, he returned to England.

He has now gone back to Moscow to renew the negotiations with the approval of the Lena Goldfields Company.

Prospects of a settlement are now more hopeful than at any previous moment, more especially as Mr. Marshall, who has a long experience of Russia, is persona grata in Moscow.

CITROEN SHARES SLUMP

(Special Air Mail Service)

Paris, Oct. 27.
An agreement for the financial reorganisation of the Citroen Company is on the point of conclusion, according to the authoritative "Information." Nevertheless, the shares of the company, which dropped from 135 to 105 last week, fell still further to 96 on Paris Bourse.

There has never been any doubt as to the success of Citroen as an industrial undertaking. At the present time the company employs 22,000 hands. Its difficulties seem to have been solely due to financial dispositions, which have resulted in a deficiency of working capital. An Exchange message from Paris says that the Ministry of the Interior, referring to allegations in the Communist newspaper "L'Humanite" that 20,000 workpeople were in danger of not receiving their wages states that the wages have been paid.

It is officially announced that the directors of the Citroen Company have decided to close down the factory on Saturdays and Mondays in future. The factory will be open for only four days a week, working a nine hours day.

LOS ANGELES HARBOUR TRADE RECORD

The port of Los Angeles last month set an all-time record in foreign commerce. The export-import totals for September were 347,531 tons, valued at $14,721,300, which show a gain over September of 1933 of 50,663 tons and $8,602,045. The gain also exceeds that of August, when a then high mark of 429,025 tons and a value of $11,810,400 was shown.

Last month's greatest gain, according to the Marine Exchange, was in imports, 35,349 tons valued at $8,606,622, as compared to September, 1933, of 49,138 tons and $2,615,405. The huge gain in import values was largely due to a shipment of $5,253,000 in silver coin and bullion from China. There was also a goodly increase of exports last month.

NEW DUTCH-GERMAN AGREEMENT

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright))

Berlin, Nov. 14.
In view of the impending termination of the Dutch-German clearing agreement, Negotiations for a new agreement will be begun shortly at The Hague at the suggestion of the Dutch Government. During the period of negotiations, the old clearing accord, which otherwise would lapse on November 17, will be applied until further notice.

BERLIN BOURSE

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright))

Berlin, Nov. 14.

The sharemarket remained calm, neither the public nor the operators showing any inclination to buy. The trend was not uniform, most prices showing a tendency to weaken. The fixed interest securities were somewhat brighter, a lowering private discount rate prompted investors to buy. Loans with gold dollar clause were eagerly sought but little stock was offered. The Reichs treasury bills of 1923, making a record advance of nearly 16 points namely from 74 1/2 to 90 1/2.

Call Money 3 1/2 to 4, Young Loan at 95, Tuesday unquoted, Reichsbank rose 1/2 to 142 1/2, Dytrusts dropped 1/2 to 138 1/2, Salzgitter Potash 146 1/2, Tuesday unquoted, German Steel Trusts declined 1/2 to 37 1/2, German Mineral Oils dropped 1/2 to 99 1/2, Siemenshalske 1/2 firmer to 135 and Bernberg Rayon jumped 1/2 to 134.
